

Populism and the politics

KURODA International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

Pandering to the public in politics is one that loses its determination. These undermine that politics is always required of itself in the right actions and decisions.

These are warnings about the reality of popularization. There is always a need for an argument to give the world in dialogue with the people.

These fundamental differences require understanding that the right government exists in the right action.

Political health resides in righteous conduct and self.

Right action gives a suitable world. This is undoubtedly the duty of politicians.

The world without dreams, what can you find in them? But we see all reality of the world. What is an impression that you have?

That causes us to pay an effort to build a reality in the world. We could consider and take any actions.

All people may follow politics under their correct actions. On the other hand, what can you see?

Politicians' sincere statements move the masses. They result from the correct self and differ from pandering to the masses.

Truth is the only condition that gives a world.

We may dream of a world that is led by all politics. As we see history, all heroes give the world, and we reach the future.