American unilateralism has sparked a global uprising. On the other hand, President Trump's domestic industry development throughout his term has brought new results and prosperity today.

The pursuit of American interests renews America's self-presence. The justice of strength exists in the future.

How does the world reflect against all these realities? As the USA does, it must pursue its benefit of self. This is so that new conflict may be wondered about, and any conflict under Amerika's unilateralism must gain part of the reality.

The president will establish new relationships between Europe and America and between Israel and America. These relationships will define the world.

Given these realities, we must act in our interest. No one can abandon themselves for the benefit of others.

Proposing a new world framework where all nations can work in their interests could be a breakthrough.

If America accepts this, we can build a new world of architecture.

All these prove that new diplomacy may cause its way to gain any realities. We need the right point of view to see the world.

Mutual benefit may be an agreement under all the above circumstances. To gather them, we have all the possibilities to create a new world system and framework.

Under all these circumstances, we may not call President Trump an idiot, but he may be wise enough to care for the world's future.
