As we, the collective force of Asia, strive to resolve all conflicts in the Middle East, we propose the convening of a significant Middle East peace conference. This is a testament to our commitment to renew our global presence.

The creation of a new reality in the Middle East, where the interests of major powers and the world intersect, and the latest proposal to the world of a Pan-Asian alliance, holds the promise of a future based on a global consensus on peace and the abolition of war.

We want to implement these proposals through a pan-Asian consensus at the upcoming United Nations General Assembly.

These are proposals made as a consensus in Asia for constructing a new world order rather than one dominated by the Western camp.

He also presented a new vision for the world, along with ceasefire resolutions in Ukraine and Gaza.

It also represents a pan-Asian agreement to recognize an independent Palestinian state and to cooperate in its reconstruction.

These are by no means clashes of civilizations but rather sincere dialogue with the conscience of the West.

These are attempts to build new global relationships based on independence and self-reliance, away from today's dependence on the world, and they propose world unity through equal cooperation and agreement on a new future.

All these are the world's new possibilities and will never be with new conflicts of civilizations. We have to say these are the conversations of civilizations.
