We want to propose a new rule of reconciliation concerning the priority of self-interest, such as the principle of economic competition and the belief in wealth. Competition always breeds conflict.

Coexistence and symbiosis make it possible for all people to enjoy their own lives.

The absoluteness of survival is everything in the past, and it is possible to propose the creation of a new world from the past, when survival demands dominated everything, along with the human problem of overcoming survival in technological and academic progress.

The ideal of a world without suffering allows humanity to seek a future with shared ideals.

A world of conflict and discord is the only solution possible through dialogue.

These demands a change in the current world framework that the choice of the world is not the victory in the competition, but the shared benefit and happiness of all people.

The past with war always asks for a solution and requires a new future.

It is possible for the world to have infinite possibilities for the future and to provide that opportunity to all people.

These are the new rules of reconciliation, and the world's decision to create a world without war and suffering will pave the way for the future.
