

Reconstruction of the world under proper motivation

KURODA International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

Proper motivation could prove progress, conquer history, and survive from the past to the future. Right motivation only gives an adequate world. And there are all calculations of any realities.

Survival instincts always govern primitive nature and animal nature. But advances in civilization and intellect provide a desire for purpose with a guarantee of survival. This progress gives us the reality of a new civilization in intelligence.

The rise and fall of all nations and civilizations in the past are the rise and fall of will. This means that reality exists in government. Today's prosperity in America must have a source of motivation. It must be understood that liberalism, to this day, cannot be denied.

Today's motivation sources are wealth, status, prestige, and abundance. On the other hand, we have the reality of responsibility. However, forming the right will always enable the creation of the right world.

A fair world is a just world that does not deprive all people of their source of motivation, as politics is responsible to all people.

Today's capitalism and the principle of competition are sources of motivation. But these are motivational formations of pecuniary and a thirst for victory. From the point of view of the right world, the proper motivational appearances should only be in some of these careers.

The equal participation of all people is based on creating a just world. These new world systems must be grounded in the reality of the right will.

One thing we could prove. If all people are allowed their dreams, all motivation may be preserved. And then we can find all hope in a people.