

Reflections on Capitalism and the Free Economy

Kuroda International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

These are, in truth, the competition for wealth and the creation of a hierarchy of wealth. On the other hand, the ethical reality of business is its contradiction.

This shows that money decides everything. That must be a business that we have to know.

We may ask for a new economic and money system in the future. These are the total control of all realities that we have to know.

As we could seek a new economic system as a money system. Since all these are the reality of desire.

We find basic income today as a new social system. Under new sociology, fairness could tail a new economic system instead of competition.

As we insist, we could ask for our economic group, and all philosophy could stand against the world's new reality.

The economy is a lifeline today. We are civilized and seek the future. That causes us to make all national security.

The driving force of capitalism and the free economy has today turned into greed. It used to be a social responsibility in ethics.

What is interesting about these is the contradiction between Western ethics and the reality of the New World Order.

All these cause us to be in touch with the following idea that basic income and a new social system may be ideas for the future.

We have a choice for the future unless we are only enslaved.