Any field of the nation requires all bases of academics. It makes it possible to build them with a right.

Academics make it possible to make all better. All national realities must be grounded in academicity.

We may calculate all reality under all these bases. Up to stand forward to the future, only the necessity we have is all bases.

Academy should give all possible under any calculation of self. Future is only found within.

This means politics have to make all these consensuses. As we know, it gives a new reality then.

For all fields, doing academic reality enables progressiveness, and the collaboration between politics and universities makes that new possibility a reality.

These scholarly examinations allow the construction of the correct reality.

All these are new realities we could seek in the future. And indeed, they give all anew, and it's progressed.

We need a future that requires all requirements of new realities.
