Transfer to a new future may be evolutionary changes we have today in the world. And it is a shift to a new world.

We need to know that all changes are the creation of new futures. We now have all the new progress of technology and systems, even in all academic fields.

They are all the basis that gives us new possibilities for society and life.

Under all changes, we may redesign all realities to new futures, and it is the habit of all politics that they can redesign the world itself.

In a shift of all realities, we may find all new dreams and hopes. This progress of reality gives us all new excitement.

Under all these new realities, we need to know how to accept a new world; we need new world systems.

And these are the arguments we have with the world today, and these are the ideas on how we can determine the world in a new future.

We can find that all shifts are new possibilities, but we are forced to make a decision for the future. And it is what decides the world itself.

The choice to have an irreplaceable future is the dream and hope of humanity, and only politicians can give it to us.

A hope could be a choice itself instead of any reality of the world. Justice may not be an illusion to face any reality of the world.

And only politics may determine the world's new order.
