New rules, systems, and technologies permit us to shift to the next society. And new governance may shift to a new future.

These are the redesigning of all realities for the next society. All the progress that we are gifted may serve us with new efficiency and productivity. And they may give us a new abundance of livelihood.

The next society must equip itself with new systems. These are the laws and rules that we can build a new future.

Its core is the digitization and automation of all realities. Then the progress of efficiency and productivity gives us new abundance and life.

As we can reach a new environmental standard, we can find a perpetual social cycle.

We can leave from the survival principle to a new purpose of the world. All shift in the habits of humanity totally changes all realities.

And new abundance may guarantee a standard of living to all people.

An independent region may ask for its own governance within its society. And these are the creation and running of its societies.

But all industries are the keys to showing us all new possibilities. And developing systems and products as technology must be all tails of its realities.

We need all the remarks that these new realities may cause in new systems. And we have all the necessities of reality, which we have to fulfill our responsibilities.

If we are given our choices, how should you design the world
