

Shifting to the next society, any actions to new infrastructure and all tails of it

October 25th, 2024

Kuroda International Consulting LLC

Takeshi Kuroda

To shift any reality to the future, we are trying to realize the next society using technology and new systems.

All these possibilities for new futures are possibilities. So we need to consider all new systems of society and nation. They are based on any reality we may find in the future.

As we find any industry, we need to create and make them a reality. From all these perspectives, we need righteous political action and detailed plans.

Any human soul has all the skills and ability to make them with a world. All these are redesigning the reality of a nation.

Any argument and discussion about creating a new reality as a nation should change any political consensus and decision, as we have taken new steps into the universe and have all new contacts and relationships with it.

All these create new possibilities for sharing with all a nation's people.

And all new consensus is the creation of the next society with all progressed political consensus and understandings.

Any determination of political decisions governs all shifts to the future, making them all possibilities.

New diplomacy and formal contact with all universe entities may change reality even in the same way as our new actions above.

And for the last moment of our conversation, who decides on it? The answer is all politics. That means they are kings.