A unified government governs Earth called the United Earth, and together with about 150 star systems, it forms a federal state called the United Federation of Planets, which organizes a space fleet to carry out missions such as galactic exploration, academic research, diplomacy, and maintaining public order. The headquarters of the United Federation of Planets is in Paris, and the headquarters of the Starfleet is in San Francisco. Military conflicts have been almost eradicated within the United Federation of Planets, but this is not true with other interstellar nations. Relations with aggressive interstellar nations such as the Klingon Empire, the Romulan Empire, and the Cardassian Union are not necessarily good, and diplomatic maneuvers, including the use of force, are being carried out. Star Trek: Enterprise depicts the era before the establishment of the United Federation of Planets, but it also features interstellar nations and aliens that appear in other works, maintaining consistency as a franchise. Also, because only a part of the galaxy is known, the series often uses patterns of first encounters with unknown aliens and astronomical phenomena that are already facts and knowledge in later works. Star Trek: Discovery's third season and Beyond depicts the world in the 32nd century, in which the United Federation of Earth, Vulcan, and other planets have withdrawn, and the United Federation of Planets has collapsed.

These are the descriptions on Wikipedia for Star Trek. We are trying to realize them in a new reality.

We are trying to make our declaration to the universe and seeking its cooperation with them; as we see on the tails of the world, we have all communication to the universe as we have all its tsar ships.

And from the universe, they have all their decision with any related here by the earth. These are newcomer price for us to share all-new reality in the future, which may expand to the whole universe.

How do you know if you have any contact with them today? And what may you decide to face any reality the universe gives?
