

Tears from Ukraine

Kuroda International

Takeshi Kuroda

War is an invasion, as the world society calls war crimes. There must be a decision from the international courthouse that the world makes its agreement.

Peace and a world define war as crimes. As humanity, how many tears do we find?

We dare to agree on all decisions of international society—the war is a crime.

Who must take responsibility for all its tragedy? We shall make all agreements in international society.

Those agreements we can work on together. We find a reconstruction of the world's reality even when we find its tails.

We may ask for the same decision of humanity as we could argue with united nations.

Under all reality, we may share new ideas that we could cooperate with and seek the same future.
