These could be proposals instead of conflicts in the world. Our choices and decisions may conflict with the reality of the world today.

The world shouldn't be ideal for everyone, but we need reality with the world itself.

Have there been any changes we have caused in the world? And if all children are served an equal education environment, what will be the difference in the future?

All politics are facing their decisions for the future. And the decision itself gives the future itself.

The world is under your control with its decisions. This means all politics is kings.

All these may contrast with reality and decisions. We all know how reality is constructed.

Reality and dream may contrast us, but whose dream of a new future may?

All freedom of rights could equally ask for the future, so we need to make ours cover any world reality as much as we can.

Fairness should be a proper rule. We can share the world, and any occupation may exist, and we need our work under all those realities. If the occupation results from efforts, we must catch up with them.

Economy, technology, progress of academics, and the military may give us a reality to ask for any reality in the world.

Then we need full details of our plans which may only permit us the future.

These are the laws of the power game, and we may not fail them.
