

The challenge of being a modern nation

February 24th, 2024

KURODA International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

The ghosts of the past of coercion and subordination confront the realities of liberalism and the future and have a choice.

These call for transforming into a modern state where individual freedom is a reality in pursuing goals.

Vested interests cannot escape the past reality of coercion and subordination, and the modern state's transformation to the correct self-foundation of autonomy and choice is the basis for a correct future that will provide a new society and way of life.

All these are the conflicts between liberalism and inhuman realities. The proper decision of the nation must ask for a new relationship with the liberal camp.

All these bases of reality and acceptance of self as all educational environments serve us new futures under its bases of socialism and philosophy.

We need to be clear there are all its fundamentals to make self under modernize all reality. If we seek its modernization, we need to make a consensus with international society.

As we may know, these are the ideas of Western socialism. And any forced reality must be denied under humanism today.

And any expansion under new technology and system opens new doors into the future.

We now find all celebration with the future in the liberal camp. New future with a new technology stepping into the universe,

But any fundamentals of nation and society must be required under all consideration of any academics. These are the habits of the West as they spent their history.