

The challenge of the next society

March 10th, 2025

KURODA International Consulting LLC

Takeshi Kuroda

Any reality may remeasure the recreation of society and life under a new vision of the next society. We need new rules and laws from new philosophies.

The new society must be based on new systems in any field, we need to know that is only acceptance that we may seek for a new society.

New technology may permit new futures. Society is always the livelihood of all peoples, and the economy gives us all its creation of the next society. These are all reasons we need all new systems which are based on clear new philosophies.

We must know the next society may serve all new dreams to all people. It may not be for any priority of nationalism.

Politics must have determined itself by now. These decisions will determine our future.

We must imagine how all new technological civilizations may be built. I am trying to reach any ideas. These are new philosophies that must correct all social environments in any field of reality.

A righteous society is created under righteous understanding, which is beside any progress of all academics to recalculate all reality of a society that exists. And then all new technology and systems give us unlimited possibilities to find us with new future.

We may idealize the society that exists to the next society. All new technology may serve more than an abundance of life.

To make the deepest consideration we find how the society must be on tails of itself. With all the above we find all hope in the next society. New socialism may equally serve the livelihood of all peoples as politics ask their duty for all peoples.