The wealthiest countries slaughter the poorest people. These are the most inhuman realities. We need proper consensus if we are trying to make a new world.

We may not ask for any tragedy in the world, and we may find that all this tragedy is caused under the ego of all kings.

The new world must be based on humanism and conscience. The United Nations held these principles before they became tools of kings.

Any recreation of reality must be based on all these agreements and consensus.

This consensus has the potential to foster equal partnerships with space entities, a testament to the power of cooperation in rebuilding the world anew.

We all experience tragedies in the real world, and we need a full solution for them. These are righteous political actions that we must ask all politicians to take.

Any measure of the world must be based on humanism. International societies must reject and deny inhuman actions.

As we try to create a new world, we have a decision and must seek all the talent who will give us the future.

We may not find any heroes in history; this is why Captain America is called the first hero we have on this planet.

We could propose a new consensus in international society that may affect the future and the new world.

One last thing: politics make them all possible. This is a reason we need real politicians.
