

The world design

September 1st, 2024

KURODA International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

Unlike the past, where survival dominated everything, the new future offers the pursuit of purpose in life.

These are total differences from the existing system, but the new world may propose a new future for everyone.

Every new technology has the potential to standardize reality across regions, paving the way for a unified global society with innovative life systems.

And we see any entity from the universe watching us from the skies. Their purpose is to cooperate with us in the future.

Redesigning the world is a task that requires the collective efforts of all human resources, transcending national boundaries. It's a mission that can only be accomplished through global cooperation.

All these are political decisions to ask for new agreements in the world.

We find that in the coming future, we have a new technological civilization under all the progress of academics.

Under all new ideas, we have to reconstruct any nation's reality, even with a world in any reality field.

A new society with new life systems may be a total shift from any past consensus to new technological civilizations.

We propose a new world system and framework under a new philosophy.

And politics may realize them all under a new consensus to reestablish the world.