

What the future holds for President Trump's tariff policies and new immigration restrictions

November 29th, 2024

KURODA International Consulting LLC

Takeshi Kuroda

These tariff policies protect their economies and are the beginning of the collapse of the free trade system. When developed countries seek to protect their economies, the world economic system will collapse, causing the reconstruction of the world in a new order.

These, along with immigration restrictions, will force developed countries to adopt a new reality and shape the world.

At this time, we may have an idea that we can ask for new economic rules, not rejection but unification of the world itself.

Then, the world is given its decisions. And it may occur in any reality of the world.

In international society, we may ask any argument to seek a new world against lies and hypocrisy.

We may propose fair rules under any agreement of nations and seek for its unification of any realities.

It is possible to divide the world in two by asking every nation to choose between its own and the world's interests.

This is the agreement of the Asian Union against the White Union, and the agreement of the world must be given to us, which will enable us to win and possess the world.