This should be the day the world reaches its dream.

But as we can calculate the world, all these prove we do not put ourselves into paradise.

We need to make a new world; this could be the proper consensus of ourselves. We can redesign the world.

We are trying to step into the future. And we need to know the correct ideas for the future.

Any academic progress may give us a new world, but if all politics make the correct consensus to recreate the world, we may find all hope for the future.

And we now have a new relationship with the universe. They could give us all new support.

All of these must be prepared for us in the future. We need to share new ideas as we can in any agreement to the future.

If all these may not be any illusion, how could we imagine the future? We have all new support to make the world new.

We must gain new understanding to make the world under new ideas.

We need a new philosophy to set the world up to paradise, as we can insist.

All politics must give a new world under all their duty and responsibilities.

We now have hope for the future. You may ask what it is. There are all new steps into the universe, and we now have all-new cooperation with them.
