

Consideration for the economic system

Kuroda International

Takeshi Kuroda

The economic principles of bases with survival and supply give the world a reality in competition and free trade. These gave birth to followers of the free market, who believe in self-help in supply and demand. This gave young people participation as a dynamism in business.

Leaving survival is always an advance in humankind. Animal nature is correct because it is based on survival and human beings have intelligence.

These show that the free economy is a means of creating wealth, and that a company has a corporate mission to pursue profits.

These are given by the praise of the winner in the reality of competition.

These free economic systems are a world of competition and winners, which the kings do.

The economic mission, on the other hand, requires social progress and sharing of daily necessities. This principle of supply and demand has the participation of all in reality, along with competition and the free market.

These have the logic of conflict and competition, the winner, and on the other hand, the ideal of cooperation and reconciliation.

These conflicts and contradictions are proved in the goodness and evils theory of affirmation and denial of human desire.

Competition gives that progress and perpetuates improvement. On the other hand, it gives a social measure called a fallen person. These elites have received their admiration, and education for children is not a human growth, but a judgment in society.

We consider these competitions to be a legacy of the war. The new world of reconciliation and cooperation has its unity as well as the possibility of creating the future.